A Small Glimpse of Greenland

We spent a day at sea sailing towards South Greenland. Our guests had a glimpse of their first glacier and witnessed firsthand the untamed strength of the wind in the area. Sailing through Kvanefjord surrounded by mountains was made even more dramatic with the sun shining through the low clouds.

The First Norsemen in Greenland

In this small village we were greeted by Greenlandic dogs, horses, sheep, and a fascinating historic heritage site: the first settlement of the Vikings in Greenland, founded by Erik the Red. Inside the reconstructed longhouse one could really get a sense of how the early Norsemen in Greenland lived. We also saw the very first Catholic church built in Greenland.

Carvings on the Rocks and the Northern Lights

Visiting this town felt like stepping into a postcard brought to life. The locals were friendly, the geography was dramatic, and there were gigantic icebergs all around us. We saw mushers and their sled dogs, and the ancient carvings of whales and human faces on the boulders and rock faces. Some enjoyed a fantastic nature hike. And upon our departure, we had our first Northern Lights sighting.

Complementing our Experience

Our guests enjoyed a relaxing day at sea with an opportunity to reflect on the wonderful days we've had so far and rejuvenate for the adventures ahead. We welcomed guests to wildlife watching on Deck 7 and to engaging lectures led by Cultural Ambassadors, historians, and scientists. By sharing their knowledge and perspectives, our experts help our guests form a deeper, more authentic, and respectful connection with Greenland and its culture.

Time to Relax

On this second day at sea our guests continued to enjoy the Expedition Team's offerings while also taking the opportunity to just relax, be pampered, and treat themselves in the spa and sauna.

An Introduction to Labrador

Today we went to the Torngat Mountains National Park Base Camp in Canada. The fjord there was particularly beautiful surrounded by the foliage with autumn colours. The most exciting part of the day? We sighted a couple of black bears in the distance!

Perfect U-Shaped Fjords

Today our guests enjoyed their first small boat cruise as we navigated an intricate system of fjords all way to the Saglek Fjord North Arm. The wind made the ride a bit choppy! This was a place of perfect U-shaped fjords, carved into the landscape as if a spoon had scooped through a bucket of ice cream. Though the glaciers have long vanished, we savoured the witnessing of their grandiose legacy.

Pine-Like Scent, Black Bears, and Polar Bears

Today we hosted an incredible nature landing! The weather was lovely and the views from the landing site were breathtaking. Our guests were greeted by a delightful, pine-like scent from the surrounding vegetation, while the warm sunlight enriched both the landscape of the fjords and their sense of wonder about the natural history of this remarkable place. Back on board, we spotted black bears and a couple of polar bears in the distance!

Ramah Bay

The autumn colours of the flora, the birds, the rocky geography, and the waterfall of Ramah Bay contributed to a beautiful and interesting day here. Michelle, our archaeologist, shared her passion for the history of this area, and the kayakers had the opportunity to go out and paddle. Some guests did a sub-Arctic 'plunge' under the cold waterfall and at the coast, with some Expedition Team members joining in!

Moravians History and a Polar Bear

We had a very special day in Hebron. We used our small expedition boats to visit the historic site of Hebron. This location holds great significance in Labrador's history, particularly for the Moravian missionaries who built the settlement and evangelised to the local Inuit community. We also had a wonderful surprise: we saw a polar bear on the island next to Hebron!

Wildlife Among the Fjords

Our guests enjoyed small expedition boat cruising today. The mountains around the fjord were of modest stature, but many guests managed to see a whale, seals, and even a small black bear wondering with its mother!

Inuit Culture and Music

Nain is always a guest favourite. We were welcomed by two Inuit trumpet players honouring their Moravian heritage. Then our guests attended an unforgettable cultural show featuring Inuit throat singing, drumming, dancing, and Inuit games. The icing on the cake was a beautiful sunset and another evening of the glorious Northern Lights.

A Day for Contemplation

Today was another sea day for guests to take an opportunity to contemplate what they've done, seen, and learned. Our Cultural Ambassadors gave talks and even introduced Inuit games. Our naturalists and historians also gave insightful talks about the region's nature and history.

Proud History

It was a bit challenging to land our small boats in Battle Harbour because of the wind, but we eventually managed it! Many of our guests enjoyed strolling through the town and visiting its museum.

The air was filled with history, and the pride of its inhabitants was palpable — a reflection of Labrador's long legacy as a vital hub for fishermen and their families.

Basque Whalers

It was a day rich in history as we explored Red Bay. Earlier, guests had been prepared with a talk on the history of whaling, helping them better appreciate the legacy of the Basque presence here. At the local museum, guests deepened their understanding of this fascinating past, while the town's warm, small-community charm — and their visit with the lighthouse keeper — made the experience even more memorable.

Leif Erikson

Today was an exciting day of exploring Viking heritage. We were welcomed by a charismatic Viking reenactor before boarding a bus for a fascinating excursion to a historic site with an impressive museum. There, our guests saw a Viking ship, traditional Norse houses — including a longhouse — and even tried their hand at axe throwing, just like Leif Erikson might have done!

Local Festivities

We were lucky to visit this town on the day they held a local festival, so there were moose burgers, live music, pumpkin contests, and so much more for our guests to experience. Those who explored the rock bridges on the add-on excursion were amazed by the striking natural beauty of these formations.
